

Rachid Rahme, MD

Clinical Instructor

LAU Medical Center Rizk Hospital

Head, Emergency Medicine

LAU Medical Center Saint John Hospital

Division of Emergency Medicine

Dr. Rachid Rahme is the Head of Emergency at LAU – Medical Center Saint John's Hospital in the division of Emergency Medicine.

Dr. Rahme studied at the University of London at Saint George's Hospital Medical school and completed his post graduate training in both general Surgery and in and Emergency. Dr. Rahme is board certified and is a fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons.

Dr. Rahme practiced in London for over 30 years as Consultant in Surgery, Consultant in Accidents & Emergency, Academic Coordinator, and Harley Street Specialist. He has a particular interest in clinical teaching and in the new setup of ER departments.

Dr. Rahme has made outstanding academic contributions, including a collaborative study titled "Paediatric injury in Beirut: a multicentre retrospective chart review study" published in BMJ Open in 2022. Additionally, he has showcased his expertise as a speaker at various national conferences and international events such as MEMC (AAEM) five consecutive times.

Dr. Rahme is an engaged member of the medical community, contributing to the field through his roles as a board member of both the Lebanese Society of Emergency Medicine and The White Coat Organization.